FRATERNITY IN FRATELLI TUTTI AND IN FRANCISCAN SPIRITUALITY. CONVERGING POINTS

MARTÍN CARBAJO NÚÑEZ

RECIPIED: 18/06/2022

ACCEPTED: 21/06/2022

ABSTRACT:

This article presents some points of convergence between the Franciscan perspective and the encyclical Fratelli tutti on fraternity. The Pope teaches that “it was the evangelical witness of St. Francis, with his school of thought, that gave the term fraternity the meaning it then preserved over the centuries.” The first part of the article focuses on how Francis of Assisi and the Franciscan Tradition have developed the concept of fraternity. The second part studies it on the encyclical Fratelli tutti. It is emphasized that both the Franciscan Tradition and Fratelli tutti offer a Trinitarian and Christological perspective that goes beyond the usual way of understanding it in our society.

KEYWORDS: Fraternity, Dialogue, Franciscan Tradition, Francis of Assisi, Fratelli tutti

SOMMARIO:

Il presente articolo mostra alcuni punti di convergenza tra la prospettiva francescana e quella dell’enciclica Fratelli tutti sul tema della fraternità. Il Papa insegna che “è stata la testimonianza evangelica di San Francesco, con la sua scuola di pensiero, a dare al termine fraternità il significato che esso ha poi conservato nel corso dei secoli.” L’articolo studia il modo in cui Francesco d’Assisi e la Tradizione francescana hanno sviluppato questo concetto (1^a parte) e come l’enciclica FT lo presenta oggi (2^a Parte). Si sottolinea che sia la Tradizione francescana che l’enciclica FT offrono una prospettiva trinitaria e cristologica che va oltre il modo abituale di intenderlo nella nostra società.

PAROLE CHIAVE: Fraternità, Dialogo, Tradizione francescana, Francesco d’Assisi, Fratelli tutti

This article shows some points of encounter between the Franciscan perspective and the encyclical *Fratelli tutti*¹ on the theme of fraternity. In this way, we complete the study that we began with two previous articles.² Some authors have stated that “fraternity is a typically Christian concept, widely developed by the Franciscan school of thought.”³ This school would have assigned to the fraternity “the meaning which it then retained in the course of time.”⁴ We will try to highlight these Franciscan roots.

The concept of fraternity is complex and has been used with different meanings. The French Revolution, for example, coined the expression: “Liberty, equality, fraternity” (“Liberté, égalité, fraternité”), which remains the national motto of France. Fraternity is here a secular concept, based on the verifiable fact that all human beings share a common nature and must therefore have equal rights.

¹ POPE FRANCIS, «Fratelli tutti. Encyclical letter on fraternity and social friendship,» [FT], (Oct. 3, 2020), Libreria Editrice Vaticana [LEV], Vatican City 2020. In the body of the text, the quotations of the encyclical Fratelli tutti will be indicated with just the numbers in parentheses.

² CARBAJO-NÚÑEZ M., «Fraternity in the encyclical Fratelli tutti. Franciscan roots,» in Revista eclesiástica brasileira (REB) 81/319 (2021) 295-319; Id., «The Lord gave me brothers and sisters. Francis of Assisi, inspirer of the encyclical Fratelli tutti,» (printing). This article will also be published in Spanish by Aedos.

The French revolutionaries soon realized that fraternity was an uncomfortable concept, which contrasted sharply with the centralizing tendency of the State and with the dynamic of confrontation that their revolution itself had generated. In 1835, Alexis de Tocqueville explained why this concept was difficult to maintain:

“Despotism, by its very nature suspicious, sees the isolation of men as the best guarantee of its own permanence. So, it usually does all it can to isolate them. Of all the vices of the human heart egoism is that which suits it best. A despot will lightly forgive his subjects for not loving him, provided they do not love one another. He does not ask them to assist him in governing the state; it is enough that they do not aspire to govern it themselves.⁵

In fact, the post-revolutionary order soon abandoned it, “up to the point of its deletion from the political-economic lexicon.”⁶ Fraternity also has no place in the Marxist ideology that justifies the class struggle to reach an egalitarian society in the future. “People of the present are sacrificed to the moloch of the future.”⁷

The first part of this article is focused on how Francis of Assisi and the Franciscan Tradition have developed the concept of fraternity. Then, in the second part, we will study how the encyclical FT presents it. It is emphasized that both the Franciscan Tradition and the encyclical FT offer a Trinitarian and Christological perspective that goes beyond the usual way of understanding it in our society. We need to overcome the current liberal ideology, which relegates family relations to the private sphere and abuses nature.⁸
